Summary: Cisco 300-135 video training material is here for providing you a gold standard training in the area of CCIE certification which will surely help you in increasing your job opportunities and your career growth. Fifty-three years ago, a yet-to-be-elected President Richard Nixon signed the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA), a law designed to protect America's environment through the Clean Air Act of 1970, the Clean Water Act of 1972, and the Endangered Species Act of 1973. These landmark laws are now among the most successful examples of public policy and environmental protection in the world. They are also of critical importance to the future of Los Angeles, the largest city in California, one of the largest U.S. cities and also one of the least green. Los Angeles is a very different city today from what it was in 1961, when President Kennedy signed NEPA into law. The City of Angels is one of the most affluent metropolitan areas in the country. It is now the third largest city in the United States, exceeded only by New York and San Francisco. Los Angeles has been named one of the top 10 cities in the world in which to live and do business by Money Magazine for the sixth straight year, and was the fastest growing metropolitan area in the U.S. last year. According to the Los Angeles Times, L.A. has grown so much that "you can no longer simply drive around the city and take in the new scenery." It is also one of the least green U.S. metropolitan areas. While the surrounding counties have more than 50 percent of the state's plant and wildlife habitats, Los Angeles has less than three percent. The City of Angels is built largely atop vast tracts of land that are as much as 200 times bigger than the average American's backyard. In 1949, when World War II ended, a broad consensus emerged among political and business leaders that America needed new ways to use the vast mineral wealth and land of California and the West. The war had not only increased America's need for natural resources and allowed new power resources to expand, but it had also induced concern about resources problems in the Pacific Northwest. During the 1950s, California's population and population density were so high that it choked on its own waste. Moreover, there was no solution to the problem, and the City of Angels was swept by a powerful waste and air pollution problem. Black smut and other b7e8fdf5c8
